Dear Ian
We've had Laura Garner reporter from NWN.co.uk contact our comms team asking when it'll be published. We've said it's confidential and up to the Trust, as we always say. Just so you know
Cheers
Sue

Dear Ian
Thanks for your note and Happy New Year - with all the challenges that brings!

The latter. From our perspective either can be published if you choose to do so; we recognised the importance of wide dissemination of the report but also the responsibility to protect individuals for the HR issues (that aspect is the only difference) which we had a duty to report formally to you as they were a concern to the review team. Under FOI the details of the HR issues could probably be reasonably withheld or redacted to protect her/others' identities if there was a risk of challenge. If the 'confidential' one is released it may be worth a conversation beforehand with the staff in question and your information governance /HR people to mitigate any risk. Happy for a call if anything else emerges, pleased things are moving forward and I'll arrange for some more formal feedback in the next few weeks if that's OK

Thanks

Sue

Good morning Sue and happy new year

We are reaching the end of the forensic review, just waiting for secondary pathology reviews of 4 cases, and are now discussing the sharing of reports. We have concerns that effectively there are two reports, one described as confidential and the other for dissemination. We don't want to be seen as concealing anything given how that would be perceived post Morecombe Bay, and whilst I appreciate that the former related to HR aspects regarding one of our nurses, is there anything in the report that the College wouldn't want published or were the two reports purely to protect the nurse and the Trust?

Thanks

Kind regards

Ian
